Smith's Walk-Out

Philadelphia, Pa.—Two threats to the New Deal ushered in the National Democratic Convention. One sponsored by Father Coughlin, launched a third party headed by representative Lemke, of North Dakota. The other consisting of an open letter calling upon all Democrats to repudiate the Roosevelt policies, signed by Alfred E. Smith, of Cambridge Colby, former Senator James A. Reed, Joseph B. Ely and Daniel F. Cohalan. Party leaders pointed out that all State delegations have been instructed for the President; that they could not switch to another candidate if they so desired.

Male President Arouses Storm

South Hadley, Mass.—For 99 years Mt. Holyoke College has been headed by a woman. Of its faculty 50 only four men hold full professorships. Therefore, when the trustees of the famous women's institution chose Dr. Roswell Gray, an English professor at Yale, to succeed President Mary E. Woolley, professor A. Elizabeth Adams launched off a 1000-word blast at the trustees, in which she says, "from the fundamental biological qualification, the best person to head a college for women is a properly qualified woman, and to head a college for men is a properly qualified man." The trustees are sitting tight on their male choice.

Negro Enters Naval Academy

Annapolis, Md.—With an average "A" rating from a Washington High school and an appointment from democratic Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, of Illinois, James L. Johnson, Jr., a negro, son of a Chicago mail clerk, has entered the U. S. Naval Academy, the first of his race in 61 years. Only three other negroes have ever entered the Academy. One resigned in his first year, one in his second, and the last was dismissed in 1875 in quarrel with another midshipman. It is estimated that a full course at Annapolis costs the Government $31,000.

SMITHS TO OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Smith will hold open house at their home on Vernon Street Tuesday afternoon, June 30, to all their relatives and friends in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary.

FARMERS IN COUNTY SIGN UP IN FARM PROGRAM

The county agricultural conservation committee reported this week that, on June 15, 298 farmers had filed work sheets in Oxford County, entitling them to take part in the agricultural conservation program. These work sheet signers qualify for benefit payments for carrying out specified soil conserving and soil building practices recommended by the Maine agricultural conservation committee for the state as a whole. 8,593 work sheets had been filed on that date with Aroostook county for its lead with 2,571 sheets in the county office. Penobscot was second, with 1,067. Work sheets are all being received by local conservation and county agents, but the sign-up is believed to be nearly complete.

The bulk of benefit payments in the county is believed to be coming from the county agents, but the sign-up is believed to be nearly complete.

MRS. CHARLES D. BEAN

Mrs. Ina B., wife of Charles D. Bean, passed away Tuesday night at her home on Mechanic Street after a long period of ill health, although the final sickness was of but a few days duration.

Services will be held at Greenleaf's Funeral Home at two o'clock Friday afternoon and interment will be at the South Bethel cemetery.

Mrs. Bean was born in Sunday River Valley, Newry, Maine, Nov. 14, 1864. She was the daughter of Elisha and Lucretia Frost Bartlett and was educated in the public schools of that town.

In January, 1884, she was united in marriage with Charles D. Bean of Bethel, who survives. Three children were born to them—Robert, of Newry; Lillian (Mrs. Homer Smith) of Bethel, and Elmer, of Colebrook, N. H. There are

CRANES RECEIVE LOVING CUP

A group made up of children, students, alumni and business and professional people made a surprise visit to the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Crane on Friday evening of last week.

Their errand was to show their esteem and appreciation of Mr. and Mrs. Crane and to offer a gift. Mr. Crane has been a popular teacher in town for five years and during that time the Crane family have endeared themselves to students and townspeople alike.

A representative of the student body presented a twelve inch silver loving cup mounted on an ebony base and bearing the following engraving: "Presented by students, alumni and friends, Bethel, 1936." Mr. Crane acknowledged the token and reciprocated by expressing their pleasure in the fine and sincere friendships formed in Bethel.

During the evening refreshments were served by the hostess and intimate friends and pool and music were enjoyed until a late hour.

The following was read:

For all the school years that have been,
For loving service, true,
This crowd of happy friends have come
To bring their best to you.

The best of all good wishes
We've gathered on our way
And all the hopes that lie beyond
Are yours, all yours, today.

BETHEL BEATEN BY BRYANT POND

By R. E. D.

Wednesday night saw the locals once more bite the dust—this time by the score of 8 to 4. For five innings Bethel was very much in the game, leading at the last of the fifth by 4 to 3. Then the blow off came in the sixth when Bryant Pond scored five runs on three hits, a base on balls, and two errors.

Stanley started Bethel off in the first with a bingle. Scribner got a walk and Daniels filled the bases with a hit. Quimby brought in one run with a long fly and Wally Morgan sent in two more with a double. Clifford singled Morgan to third but the scoring ended until the third. Here Quimby singled with one out. Morgan walked. Clifford singled and Dayen worked the squeeze play to score Bethel's last tally.

Bryant Pond meanwhile had scored three in the third. Trailing 4 to 3 going into the sixth they opened up on Quimby and settled the verdict with a five run splash. An error on a double play ball gave the visitors the chance to continue their scoring in the third while two fumbles hurt the locals in the sixth.

On the whole Bethel showed vast improvement over last week but the infield still lacks the continued practice. The keystone smoothness only to be acquired by combination still needs polishing, especially on possible double play balls.

Scribner and Clifford led the attack for the locals with two hits apiece while W. Morgan's double was the only Bethel extra base out. J. Farrar and Waterhouse led Bryant Pond with the willow with a double and single for each man.

Canada's New Deal Wrecked

Ottawa, Can.—In a series of sweeping decisions somewhat analogous to those of the Supreme Court of the United States the Dominion's Supreme Court scrapped the bulk of Canada's New Deal legislation. The six justices arrived at their decisions after hearing a 500,000-word report in 14 days, studying briefs for five months. As the Court renders "opinions" only, appeal may be carried to the Privy Council in London.

Death's Flight Aftermath

New York City—Reports coming in from many sources indicate a trail of disaster following the death of Joe Louis by Max Baer's punch in their heavyweight battle. Three Canadian and eight American three of them Negroes died from excitement while listening to the radio description of the fight. A Negro porter, month filled with earned hope, choked to death at the news of Louis' defeat. A Mexican was killed to death in a brawl after the fight. Thomas O'Rourke, 30-year-old handler of horses, died in Schenck's dressing room. The Negro fighter's wife fainted when he went down for the final count. Principal group casualty was the reputation of sports writers all of whom packed Louis to win.

Kansas Oil Boom

Topeka, Kansas—Kansas is teaming with a favorite son running for the Presidency, and bumper crops indicated as wheat, potatoes, corn and soybeans. The state's oil wealth mounted when two new oil fields were located in Rice County. One of them produced a 100-barrel gusher, and oil men say the household pool in one of the larger discoveries of the year.

Curbs on Chain Stores

Washington, D. C.—One of the last bills passed by the retiring Congress was the Anti-Price Discrimination measure aimed at the chain stores. It curbs special discounts, kills "loss-leaders," discourages secret rebates and other means of giving the chains an advantage over independent stores. It is estimated that last year between 125,000 and 150,000 chain stores did 25% of the nation's thirty-billion-dollar retail trade.

Earth's Age Computed

Rochester, N. Y.—Before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, two University of Rochester physicists explained scientific geological researches by which they placed the age of the world at 2,500,000 years. A thousand scientific papers, one of them describing a new and largely successful treatment for phosphenic cause of a third of the world's blindness.

Underwater Antles

Seattle, Wash.—While working on a ship in the Pacific, a scientist has discovered a new kind of antler. It is called the "underwater antler" and is found on the heads of certain deep-sea fish. The antler is made of a substance called "chitin" and is used by the fish to catch their prey.

To Hate and to Hold

Washington, D. C.—With justice being done at the Supreme Court, the President of the United States has issued a decree that all persons who are found guilty of treason shall be executed. This decree is a direct result of the recent trial of the traitors who had betrayed the United States during the Civil War.

Belled in Hay Fever

London, England.—A new method of treating hay fever has been discovered by a British scientist. The method involves the use of a special bellows to deliver a stream of air to the nostrils. This air is then filtered through a special material which removes the pollen from the air. The result is a clear, pollen-free air which can be breathed without causing any discomfort.

The police had photographed the convict in six positions and sent the pictures throughout the country, asking the authorities to apprehend him. Promptly came the reply from the marshal of Hicksville Corners, which had as follows: "Received the pictures of criminals. Have captured five of them and am on the trail of the sixth."

"Hank" Tise and John Twaddle have been about as busy as two boys could be for the past two weeks. Have been working nights, Sundays and holidays. If there were any getting some camps ready for a group of boys who want to learn about all the real Maine Woods.

Wedding Reception

Friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Hanson Olson of North Newry gave them an informal reception and shower at Newton's Hall, Friday evening. A mock wedding was enjoyed as were piano solos by Mrs. Myra Foster and harmonica selections by Charles Smith and Charles Knight.

The hall was prettily decorated with evergreen and astringas forming an arch with a large wedding bell in it. The gifts were many, consisting of silverware, glass ware,
table linen, towels, Pyrex dishes,
china and money. The wedding cake was made by Mrs. Charles Fred. Refreshments of fancy cookies and fruit punch were served by Mrs. Harrington and Mrs. Newton assisted by Mrs.
Parker, Mrs. Moore, Miss Freda
Harrington and Miss Pauline Harrington. Dancing was enjoyed until nearly midnight.

Mrs. George Knight had the misfortune to fall on the stairs at Newton's Hall and cut her head quite badly necessitating her being rushed to Bethel where Dr. R. R. Tibbottis dressed the cut, taking three stitches.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hastings and children were in Augusta on Friday, Whitefield Friday night, and in Monmouth Saturday, returning home Saturday evening.

David Enman and Anthony Maddix are helping G. K. Hastings and William Hastings peel pulp this week.

Miss Iva Bartlett is employed at Maple Inn.

Raymond Bartlett has employment at Randolph, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hastings and children enjoyed a trip through Grafton Notch to Errol and home
by way of Berlin, Sunday.

S. B. Newton is building an addition to his barn.

Mr. and Mrs. Urban Bartlett and son Claude were week end visitors
of relatives in Portland.

Eugene Hume, Bernard Bartlett, Edna Hume, Melton Kimball and Alison Smith enjoyed a camping trip to Spec Pond from Thursday
until Saturday.

MILTON

Mrs. Mattie George and grandson, Harry Packard, were here recently.

The Soap Club met with Clara
Jackson Saturday with a picnic dinner out of doors. All seemed to have a good time.

Harry Billings and family visited Mansfield Packard and family at their cottage at Locke Mills Sunday.

Lee Billings is working in the mill for Ann Sessions at Abbott's Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Davis of Rumford were recent callers at Ellis Bowker's.

Mrs. George Davis is in the hospital at Rumford for treatment.

Mrs. Dasha Ackley visited her son, Ernest Sessions, over the week end.

Yes, the forecasters were wrong.
Practically all of the myriad news conducted in the country—including this one—anticipated fireworks and warfare when the elephant tumbled into Cleveland. They expected that the much-publicized
"Stop Landon" movement would take on cyclonic proportions. Instead, it was never more than a passing breeze, and within two days of the convention's start it had shrunk to almost a dead calm.
The other candidates were no less ambitious than before to carry the GOP banner into the November lists, but they saw the handwriting on the wall, and accepted it. They had as much chance of stopping the Governor of the sunflower state as they had of stopping the tides—when the New York and Pennsylvania delegations, hitherto considered doubtful, were polled and showed heavy Landon majorities, it was all over but the formality of calling the roll of states.
The same thing became true of the vice-presidential nomination, when Senator Vandenberg refused second place on the ticket. Publisher Knox was the logical and inevitable choice.

The rise of Landon will go down
in history as one of the most remarkable events in American politics, whether he wins or loses in November. Two years ago few persons outside of the Middle West even knew who he was. A year later he was a national figure. And by the time the convention came round, it couldn't be questioned that his was the great measure of Republican support. As everyone knows, the so-called Old Guard would have preferred someone else
—but the Old Guard's influence in the convention was practically nil.
The immediate group around Landon consists of young men—some of them in their twenties, few beyond their middle forties. Landon himself is under fifty.

Equally remarkable is the fact that one of Landon's principle advocates, according to some of the better political writers, is that he is not a particularly exceptional man.
He is a mediocre speaker, but his manner of delivering a talk endears him to many listeners. He is never dramatic—and that many regard as a virtue, in that he will present an entirely different personality from his opponent, Master Showman Roosevelt. He is quiet, slow to make up his mind, chary of experiments. There is a wide streak of liberalism in his makeup, and that appeals to millions of voters.

Proof of the fact that he knows what he wants is found in his telegram concerning the Republican platform. The platform, trying as it did to please conflicting interests within the party, studiously avoided saying anything very definite about the gold standard. Governor Landon says he favored the amendment—and that he wanted a dollar exchangeable for gold on demand.
Otherwise he said, he stood by the platform as written.

It has been observed that few voters ever read a party platform
—it is usually long, involved and is far from easy. Whether that is true or not the Republican platform, shorter than most, deserves a reading by friends and foes of the GOP alike. As was to be expected it begins with a sweeping denunciation of the New Deal. Then it gets down to what the Republicans want, and includes the following important planks:

RELIEF: Return of relief administration to non-political local agencies familiar with local conditions. Federal grants for relief to states and territories.

SOCIAL SECURITY: All citizens
over 65 to receive money enough to maintain them in comfort, the money to be derived from a "direct tax widely distributed."

AGRICULTURE: A program of "abundance" instead of one of "scarcity." Restriction of imports
A national land use program, whereby abandoned and non-productive farm lands will be leased or purchased by the government and

STRIP POKER

used for purposes of wild-life conservation, watershed protection and flood control, etc. Provision of ample farm credit at low interest rates. Encouragement of cooperative marketing.

FINANCE: Stop "uncontrolled spending." Balance the budget by drastic cuts in expenditures. Revise the Federal tax system. Oppose further dollar devaluation. Cooperate with foreign powers toward currency stabilization as soon as the national interest justifies it.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS: A policy of relative isolation is advocated, and opposition to American participation in the World Court or League of Nations. No entangling alliances in foreign affairs, and peaceful relations with all powers.

MONOPOLY: The platform denounces private monopoly, favors vigorous enforcement of all criminal and civil laws to stamp it out. Pledges maintenance of free enterprise.

In addition, the platform records itself as being in favor of the merit system (civil service) for government workers, denounces
the use of patronage to create "political machines," and advocates
Federal regulation of securities concerns, interstate activities of public utilities, etc. It pledges itself to the complete maintenance of Constitutional safeguards for the individual, and the safeguarding of freedom of press, speech and radio.

HINKLEY—CLIFFORD

Miss Arlene Estelle Clifford and Arnell Hinkley were married Sunday, June 14, at a pretty outdoor wedding in the pine grove which adjoins the Methodist parsonage.

The bridal party came from the parsonage to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. Mildred Lyon, and took their places under an evergreen arch where the double ring service was performed by the bride's father, Rev. P. J.
Clifford, assisted by Rev. Charles Kinney of Rumford.

The bride was given in marriage
by her brother, Richard Clifford,
and during the ceremony Masters York of Winthrop sang "Till the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold."

The bride was gown in white crepe with a veil and carried white iris. Her matron of honor, Mrs.
Doris Paine, a sister, wore pink silk organza and carried yellow iris. The bridesmaids, Miss Minto Kimball and Miss Ruth Towle, who wore blue and pink organza, carried yellow iris.

Miss Lorraine Collins, in white swiss with blue ribbons, was the flower girl, while Harlan Blake was the ring bearer. The best man was Gerard Williams and the ushers were Norris Brown and Donald Paine.

At the reception following the ceremony, the guest book was in charge of Mrs. E. C. Norton and Miss Herbertina Norton had charge of the gift room.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinkley left for a trip to Conway, N. H., and on their return will be at home at the Aubin house on Mason street.

Mrs. Hinkley is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Clifford of Bethel. She is a graduate of Winthrop high school, the University of New Hampshire and Farmington Normal School and has taught school for several years.

Mr. Hinkley is the son of Clarence Hinkley. He received his education at Gould Academy and is employed at Locke Mills.

Guests from out of town who attended the wedding were Rev. and Mrs. Charles Kinney, William Kinney of Rumford, Mr. and Mrs. Earle R. Warren, Mrs. Dorothy Kelley of Conway, N. H., Mrs. Ralph Bennett, Miss Pauline Bennett, Paul G. Norton of Center Conway, N. H., Mr.

Platform Pledges

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

America for weeks to come will main acutely Platform-conscious.

Carefully it will ponder the pledges written by each major party into the statement of policies which must serve as a chart during the next few years.

In studying those pledges America must remember that a national platform represents far more than series of promises calculated to win popular approval.

It represents a solemn contract which should be as serious, as binding, as any covenant under law. It is an agreement which should be as sincere as any made between friends and sealed with a handshake.

That is why in drafting a platform, no party, no candidate, is justified in writing mere political propaganda. None is justified in "creating a catch-all for votes. None is justified in adopting the theory of the forgotten homespun philosopher who commented:

"A platform ain't what you ride
—it's what you get in on."

America therefore must demand from a party and its candidate in-more than a series of promises enunciating policies under which the people may be led to believe the will benefit.

It must demand the assurance that those promises will be fulfilled to the best of the party's ability.

The furor created by the clock-
and managed clamor that sweeps candidate to victory is thrilling—
short-lived.

The memory of kept or broken pledges endures.

HOW MODERN WOMEN LOSE FAT SAFELY

Gain Physical Vigor—Youthfulness—With Clear Skin and Vivacious Eyes—That Sparkle With Glorious Health. Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses. Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—in 4 weeks get on the scales and note how many pounds of fat have vanished. Notice also that you have gained energy—your skin is clearer—you feel younger in body—Kruschen will give you a joyous surprise. Get a bottle of Kruschen Salts—the cost is trifling and it lasts 4 weeks. If you don't feel a superb improvement in health—more gloriously energetic—vigorously alive—your money gladly returned. But be sure for your health's sake that you ask for and get Kruschen Salts. NOTE—Many people find that the only diet change necessary while taking Kruschen regularly is TO EAT LESS.

the difference with Economical ELECTRIC Cookery

The thriftiest person would be tickled with the many ways you can save money cooking electrically. For example, low ELECTRIC rates (most cooking is done on the 2c step) gives you downright economy; cheaper cuts of meat cook up tender and flavorful in controlled electric heat; the Thrift Cooker (termed by many the "Scotch Kettle") turns out an entire delicious meal with about the same current consumption as an electric lamp. Then, too, there is the saving you enjoy on cleaning and redecorating.

CHAPTER XI

"WHO murdered Mike Kelly?"
Pat—darling—was it you?"

The Globe had answered the question—yes—in Southampton, Barry Gilbert held this girl-of-all-girls in his arms, and asked it again.

For a moment, she stared at him, dazed and inert, and then she pushed him away.

"Let me sit down, please," she said, coldly.

She remained standing, however, when Barry released her, though she still clung to the chair at which she had stopped when she came into the room. "Do you really think I could kill anyone?" she asked, with just a trace of amusement tempering the wonder and resentment in her tone. "But, of course, I know why you think it. My father said he couldn't tell the truth because of a woman. The woman was my dead mother."

"I'm sorry," Barry began. "It doesn't matter," the girl interrupted. "Nothing much matters now. Peter says this evening's Globe completely clears young Riddler, and that they'll probably release him tomorrow. That's all you want, isn't it? And, if you don't mind, I'll go upstairs to my father. He's really ill."

She had closed the door to the hall after her and Barry opened it. "Can I do anything?" he asked lamely.

"No, I don't think anything can," Pat answered. "Nothing father or I could say now would help Morano, or anything. Is Evans out side?"

"Yes."

"Then, of course, you'll see Peggy. Her worries are over. Please tell her how glad I am, and that I'll phone later about Jacky."

They were in the hall by this time and the latter appeared on the landing.

"You came to your father, Mike?" he asked, quietly.

"Yes, of course. But right, just as quickly and without looking at Barry again turned and ran up the stairs.

Well, that was over—along with everything else. I made a clean sweep when I was at it. Barry told himself ruefully, on his way to the hospital. "What did I have to do at my mouth for just at the last minute? My dead mother? These words, and my whole train of suspicion went off the rails."

It had taken Harwood barely more than 24 hours to get his man. He certainly worked fast. Barry paid mental tribute; once he'd identified that voice on the phone. Some time before the evening papers would reach Southampton what was the difference? Nothing much matters now. Pat had said, and it didn't. They'd probably release young Riddler tomorrow, and, two days later, old Riddler would be in New York. "I've got plenty to do," Barry said to himself, and to Evans. "I've had a cable from Mr. Riddler. He's on the Bremen, arriving Saturday. You'd better get your wife back to town."

"They were at the hospital now," said Evans made no reply.

Peggy came into the reception room. "I can't stay," she began. "Jacky's up there. He says everything's all right, but, somehow, I'm worried."

"Can you stand a bit of good news?" Barry asked.

"I don't know. I haven't had any in so long."

"It's about Jack."

He wanted to "break it gently," but Pat's eyes were

"He's—What is it? Just another clue? Or—Go on, please."

"They've arrested Morano. Peter phoned Judge Hambridge. He says Jack'll be out tomorrow."

Peg didn't move.

At least her body didn't but she ran her tongue over her lips, and her hands opened and closed spasmodically.

After a moment: "No foolin'?" she said.

It was an absurd thing to say, but, in a long experience with suffering, Barry had learned that just such things are said under stress.

"No foolin'."

Tears came into the girl's eyes, and flowed down her cheeks.

"It's in tonight's Globe," Barry told her. "The papers aren't here yet, but I'll ask Evans to bring you one. There doesn't seem to be any possibility of mistake. I'll go in to town by the first train in the morning. I'll take care of everything, and keep in close touch with you."

"Thanks," Peggy said.

One syllable, but Barry thought he had never heard so much praise and gratitude before. His own eyes were threatened with moisture, so he declared, "You'd better get back to the boy. Pat's going to phone later, and I'll ring up tonight. That's all now."

And he left the room as abruptly as Pat had left him, a few minutes ago.

"Home?" Evans asked.

Barry nodded. That word was the last straw.

"Anything else, sir?" Evans inquired, in front of the Riddler house. "Yes, please. The instant the evening papers get to Southampton, will you bring me a copy of the Globe, and take one to Mrs. Rogers?" He gave the chauffeur a quarter. "Kelly's murderer's under arrest," he continued, "and we're through 'blething.' You'll find it all in the Globe."

"Yes, sir."

Evans was thinking of something else.

"You understand—about Mrs. Evans?" Barry asked.

"Yes, sir." A pause. "You ain't staying here yourself, I take it?"

"I am leaving tomorrow."

"I was wondering," Evans said, "would you like us to come with you?"

"Very much," Barry answered, "but it can't be done."

"You ain't always going to live in a hotel—begging your pardon, sir. Mrs. Evans is a mighty good cook."

"Thanks," Barry returned, "but my cooking's going to be provided by the state of New York. You may as well know the truth, Evans. I'm not Mr. Riddler. Never was. I jimmied my way into this house for a night's shelter, and then you and Willett came, and thought I was Riddler, and I let you go on thinking so. The game's up now. The boss gets back Saturday, and what happens then is anyone's guess."

Evans said, "Yes, sir."

"That's all, except I'd be glad if you'd tell Willett, and the rest. I'll save me introducing the subject."

"Yes, sir."

"And better stand by tonight. I may have to drive back to the hospital."

"Yes, sir. . . . I was wondering."

Barry grinned.

"You do a good deal of that don't you?"

"I was wondering how you'd like to go to my sister's. You know where I live in town. You could lay low there a while and then slip away somewhere."

"That's swell of you," Barry responded. "Much obliged. But I think I've done all the slipping that's good for a man. Tell Willett, when you get a chance, and remember to bring me the Globe."

It was close on to five o'clock then, and "plenty to do" before dinner. Willett wasn't about luckily. Barry let himself in with his key, and ran up to his room. Should he pack first, or get the rest of it out of the way?

He decided to begin with "the rest of it."

From a long envelope, in his inside pocket, he took all his vouchers. Then, on a sheet of note paper, he wrote, "Received . . . Cash $200." Beneath that, he listed the check from Mrs. Riddler, and "board, lodging etc." Under "Disbursed," he credited himself with the same check, which had been banked for

"That Leaves My Account Straight," Barry Thought.

Peggy, and with whatever sums he had given her, and a few minor expenditures. "That leaves my account straight," Barry thought. "Except for unlawful entry, tampering with the mails, and pretending to be somebody I wasn't."

It left his bank account far from straight. When he'd subtracted "Disbursed" from "Received," and made out his check for the balance, the result was a rather startling overdraft. "All right," Barry said. "I'll sell out my wardrobe. Studs, and cuff-links, and things. I guess I won't need 'em any more."

He wanted—terribly—to write a letter to Mrs. Riddler. It would have begun, "Dear Mother: (Not mine, of course.) That was too maudlin. 'Me: I'm just a sob-sister,' Barry berated himself, tucking his accounts, accompanied only by his check, into an envelope, and inscribing it, "Mrs. John (Clarke) Riddler, Addressed." He propped the envelope against a calendar, and, for a moment, sat looking at it. "I wish I could find my mother."

He had thought, his first morning at Southampton. He wished it even more fervently now, after all these weeks of "make believe."

"I've got to write Pat," he decided, at last. "I certainly owe her an apology, and a 'good-by.' This letter certainly mustn't be 'maudlin.'"

"Dear Pat," he started. "Dear Pat: If I suppose I should write 'Miss Hambridge' now, but I can't. You wouldn't let me say I was sorry for what happened today, but I am. I won't try to excuse myself. You'll forget it, I hope, as quickly as you'll forget everything else in this grotesque association. I won't forget. You're the real lady I ever knew. So this is thanks and good-by to you and your father, and—most sincerely trusting that your worries, like Peg's, are over—I remain always respectfully, Barry Gilbert."

Packing proved complicated. Most of his clothing—paid for long ago—was out here, and had to be taken in. But there was no suit-case. Next, to the end, Barry folded his belongings into two tailor's boxes. He hadn't quite finished folding when Willett knocked.

"Evening paper, sir."

"Thank you."

"And your key, sir. You left it in the front door."

"You'd better keep it. And there's a letter for Mrs. Riddler on the desk there. I'd like her to get it when she arrives."

"Very good, sir. Dinner at seven."

"If you please."

That was all. No reference to Barry's packing, or the confession that—Barry felt sure—had been relayed by Evans half an hour ago. "I'm taking the 7:21 back to town tomorrow morning," Barry said, as Willett was closing the door, but Willett only answered, "Yes, sir," and went on closing it.

Morano hadn't been arrested. So much was clear from the screaming headlines Barry scanned. However, "that ends it," Barry felt sure. "Harwood did a swell job. Why didn't I follow up the number of that cab? It didn't seem of the least importance when the taxi-driving medico gave it to me. I might have known it was, though, when Ernie wrote it down in his notebook."

Dinner was uneventful—with Willett remembering his "position" and behaving as any well-trained butler might have been expected to behave. Afterward, Barry phoned Peg. She had seen the Globe, but was still dubious. "Do you really think they'll let Jack out now?"

"Certainly. They're not going to get that sheet started again on Tammany Hall."

"And it'll be tomorrow, you think?"

"Probably. I'll keep in touch with you," Barry promised, and finished his packing. Then he re-read the Globe story, and marked parts of it—to ponder in town.

Throughout breakfast next morning, Barry wondered whether this remarkable butler could know he was "going for good." "I've left a few parting gifts on my desk," he ventured, at last. "For cook, and everybody. Will you take care of 'em?"

"Yes, sir."

"I shan't be back. I suppose Evans told you."

"Yes, sir."

That was too much.

Barry said, "Well, what do you think about it?"

"That's not for me to say, sir. My place is to obey orders. I've tried to do that, sir. If I've made a mistake, it hasn't been for want of trying."

"Your mistake was quite natural," Barry reassured him. "You'd been told you'd find young Mr. Riddler here, and you found me. I said I was young Mr. Riddler. That seems to let you out."

"Yes, sir."

Willett hesitated.

"Anyway, that wasn't the mistake I had in mind, sir. That was a natural mistake. I thought you were a gentleman. I still think so. It's five after seven, sir."

16 grandchildren and one brother, Fred Bartlett of Mechanic Falls. It seems fitting that we pause in the regular routine of our lives to pay tribute to this much loved woman, whose untiring devotion combined with her willing hands have soothed so many sick and weary people in the past years.

Of a courageous optimistic nature, she overcame obstacles that would have daunted many. Her cheery smile and unselfish deeds for others' happiness will ever be an inspiration and a benediction.

In her home and the near and dear members of her family lay her complete happiness. It was here that her friends received royal hospitality, for brightening not only the home but serving and loving every needy soul as well as being a comfort to those in trouble seemed to be her aim through life. And still with all the close home ties and her warmth of affection for her own, she was not selfish in her love. It passed out and beyond the family circle to a host of friends and even in her last hours she requested those with her to "Say good-bye to my old friends for me."

We will not call her dead. We cannot believe all the goodness and brightness of life could end. It was a flight into some other country, which is made better and brighter because of her presence there.—near or far, we cannot tell.

I think it is not far—
The way we go,
Nor will the way be strange—
For us to know.
For "over there" is just
The same as here—
The earth a shadow is
Of heaven near.

When bowed with a weight of sorrow
We see dimly through our tears,
And we long for the sweet toned music
Of a voice we have loved for years,
Then it's hard to repeat "Our Father,"
And "Thy will be done" to say,
When the one we loved the dearest
Has been called by God away.

The sun's golden gleams of splendor
Shine soft from the cloudless West,
But how can we look at its beauty
When sorrow is filling our breast?
The birds carol soft from the tree tops—
We care not for their musical strain,
For death has so surely and swiftly
Filled our lives with bitterest pain.

You tell us the flowers are blooming;
Oh, you can not comfort us so,
For over our hearts unrelenting Sweep the rushing waters of woe.
In vain we list for the footsteps
That oft sounded so buoyant and free.
All in vain we long for the coming
Of one we shall never more see.

'Till we are freed from earth's troubles
And pass over the narrow way
To the gates of that wonderful city
Where Eternity seems but a day
We are taught that in loving kindness
Such trials to us are given;
So in sadness we bow to God's power—
There's one more waiting in Heaven.

"Christian Science" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 28.

The Golden Text is: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in Among the clattions from the three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened" (Matt. 13:33). Bible is the following: "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:31, 32).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The Principle of divine metaphysics is God; the practice of divine metaphysics is the utilization of the power of Truth over error; its rules demonstrate its Science" (Page 111: 11-14).
